Please note that the content of this book primarily consists of articles available from Wikipedia or other free sources online. Pages: 28. Chapters: Boston and Albany Railroad lines, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis Railway lines, Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway lines, Michigan Central Railroad lines, Harlem Line, High Line, Green Line "D" Branch, Hudson Line, West Side Line, Beacon Line, Grand Junction Railroad and Depot Company, St. Lawrence Subdivision, Charlotte Running Track, Mohawk Subdivision, Porter Subdivision, Rochester Subdivision, Hudson Subdivision, Selkirk Subdivision, Dayton District, Montreal Subdivision, Boston Subdivision, Lockport Subdivision, Berkshire Subdivision, St. Louis Line Subdivision, Post Road Branch, Niagara Subdivision, Short Line Subdivision, Erie West Subdivision, Windsor Subdivision, River Subdivision, Cleveland Terminal Subdivision, Columbus Line Subdivision, Lake Shore Subdivision, Detroit Line, Castleton Subdivision, West Shore Subdivision, Schodack Subdivision, Bergen Subdivision, Carman Subdivision, Belt Subdivision. Excerpt: Metro-North's Harlem Line, originally chartered as the New York & Harlem Railroad, is an 82-mile (132 km) commuter rail line running north from New York City into eastern Dutchess County. The lower 53 miles (86 km) from Grand Central Terminal to Southeast, in Putnam County, are electrified with a third rail and has two (or more) tracks; north of that point, trains use diesel locomotives on a single track. The diesel trains run as a shuttle on the northern end of the line except during rush hours, when they run as expresses to or from Grand Central. There is also one direct roundtrip to Grand Central on weekends. While the line has traditionally served to bring commuters from Westchester County to jobs in the city, in recent years it has begun to see more "reverse commuting," as Bronx residents use it to reach jobs in Southern Westchester where many stations are within walking...
