I have a Galaxy Saturn Turbo that is experiencing low output power on AM and SSB. I have disconnected the amp so I can verify the main board 1st. On AM i am getting ~1 watt and SSB about 2.5 watts. I do have 6 volts am 13 volts SSB at the collectors of the driver and final. The variable power knob does not change the output power.

My Galaxy Saturn has a low RF power output for some reason. With the RF power knob set at max it will only dead key at 1/2 watt and only swing to 5-6 watts. Similar issue on either sideband with the exclusion of a carrier. This is a dual final radio based on the Galaxy EPT 360014B board or DX77 mobile I believe.

The Saturn Turbo has always had that problem. There are two reasons why. The first is that the unit is being pushed too hard. The second is the series pass Transistors are not capable of handle the current when the unit is in the SSB mode and pushed to the limit, I suggest keeping the power low and replacing the Series pass Transistors with 2N ...
